

... the ... of the ...

... the ... of the ...
... the ... of the ...
... the ... of the ...
... the ... of the ...
... the ... of the ...

... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...

... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...

... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...

... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...
... accident ...

The deep sea & our two is in the direction, so it is upon the fine shore of the sea - It gives us a view of a piece of water & forest of trees & houses and be set up as, this morning. It is a great stone house to the east, & see some gardens where typical things were, from New Holland, & African, &c. &c. A single large white & snowy almost like a pine, was all the settled things - but it is, our first house things, great trees - Dismal & high! - The took the time at 10 & found our arrival, had a view of the side here. The forest was much the same character until I arrived here, the curious it was more some like, for some 2 or 3 miles,
the hills were now very wooded, & it is a very rich pine,
it is very like it - Today too we have seen oranges, & a little both the pointed and hidden fruit; they began about the row trees, & stone houses we are seeing now with their undead tops - I had on such trees, & looking in colour, & thick green leaves, & all around, I never saw anything like the edges of them! It is true about 4 or 5 miles, with sandy, red & brown stands of rich stone - There seem to be a well & full of honey, with next night we were at a, with small house, in a common in the dinner, but some french bushes accommodation in our chamber - but it has been very delicious, & two Frenchmen on side, it is common a population of the rain. It is a very rich & fruit of the fruit like the stone trees - but I do not know the name.

... die, one son! - We were all perfectly satisfied with the beauty of the view, and the car, and it was indeed a fine day when the road turned down to the sea, and we came in sight of the sea, blue & bright, and for a while, until the recent rain, it was indeed a fine day. We passed a tower, Roman it is said, and Dr. ... made a detour to see it, a rude little village clustered near, & on a solitary peak round which he built the out coming near he saw ruins among the old high house & narrow strong hold it was said - Then we came under some vines, shoes, then some trees, and we were a milder climate - And so sometimes we forget the winter, seeing Villa Franca and its towers, and its island, and at length the low down snow walked across, and there in the snow, I'd marked, and so we came to the winter in ... with, through narrow streets, the market square, and some other ... of ...

After Trentone came the French terrace, the road ... and quiet spots to reach, then ... and a ... with an area of ... paved road. ... side, ... a promontory, and below the point here pointed out Palapa's house. The ... a pretty, little, low ... over the road, and ... River at ... out with ... from ... in the middle of the promontory -

Dec. 2nd. Palazzo Breno - Fres Trentone -
How I did wish yesterday, my dear Luc, I could only have put you all with me into carriages to enjoy the same magnificent scenery & delicious air! I could not help feeling that it seemed more than my share of blessing to be having it to myself, & to think of you all in winter at home, with fires & furs, & bare trees & brown leaves! I thought of Katie's ball, & wished I could take over the Atlantic the lovely roses & orange blossoms that were bedding the road-side east of the river - It is a day to be always remembered by me, that Dec. 1st, 1860, & I was quite exhausted at night with pleasure!
He looked a little doubtfully at the clouds in the morning, but the sun once promised a good day, so he left the landlord of the Hotel d'Anfletiere (a very nice comfortable hotel it was) to engage a carriage for us, & went out to take a turn round the explanade, - on which our hotel looked, open to the sea on one side, the other pretty much surrounded by hotels; which also ran on the land side of the broad street skirting the shore, & connecting by a bridge with the old town, where is the harbour - He overlooked from the side, where the river runs in, & saw all the houses of the town, one would think, rushing out thence a little stream, ran down into a very stone tank at which the crowd easily stood, & there was a row of ...

The road... in...
... at present...
... road...
... river...
... mountains...
... the sea...

The river is... a river, not a dra...
... road, sandy bed, but a huge...
... mountains...
... the far sides to contain it...
... mouth...
... the sea...
... the hills...
... the top...
... water...
... covered...
... stream...
... the road-side...

... passed to...
... villas...
... roads...
... across...
... woman...
... under...

... hills, up we...
... back to the sea...
... under...
... pleasant...
... on the great...
... on the terraced...
... our side...
... blossoms...
... the mountain...
... meant...
... showing...
... about...
... hunched...
... all...
... eyes...
... more...
... in...
... "Oh!...
... types...
... peak...
... and...
... and...
... and...
... best...